The Faces software that students will use during this lesson, is an educational version of a technology that is currently being used by thousands of police agencies around the world. One of the goals of this lesson is for students to have the opportunity to go through a process similar to the one investigators use to interview a witness, obtain a physical description of the suspect and develop a composite. Police will often use a cognitive interview approach to improve memory recall. The cognitive approach takes the witness back to the day of the incident.
